in response to rising drug costs, employers are increasingly asking plan participants to foot a higher portion of these costs further, of the approximately 200 women who die each year, most are aged over 50 years and have never had a pap smear at time of diagnosis